Fixed german subtitles for some channels, but some are still missing. More fixed: 2012/09/23 added 720p MP4 videos, 2012/09/26 added: Realtek rt8187sc v2.2 w/ RTL8188se2 (w/ non working voice system, w/o over the air, w/ software-based ir receiver). You don't need the infrared receiver to have working voice system, so it should be possible to create a workable OTA receiver with a software based ir receiver. The IR receiver is probably in the same name-space as the software based ir receiver, so be sure to get the correct one. Full instructions for this are under the section for the software based ir receiver. The low power IR receiver also has to be correctly powered by a receiver IR emitter, so make sure this works as well. Used I do, but it looks like the antenna connection of the two are similar, so I'm not sure what the differences are. It also has a proprietary DVD drive, but I think the hard drive is more likely to have an issue. If you don't know the model number off the top of your head, you can get it from the drive itself. Or it may have been replaced recently, and the new drive has a sticker on it. Additionally, he's trying to figure out if the drive is a DVD-writer or a DVD-ROM, which may require more parts to even test it properly. I also agree that it probably isn't going to be worth your time. If you're going to take it apart, at least be sure that you're willing to pay for it if it can't be fixed. It's possible that the repair will cost more than the cost to buy a new drive, and the electronics are not particularly easy to diagnose, so it's probably better to get an external drive than to risk there, I think they will probably charge you upwards of $250 to test it properly and fix it for you, if it's even fixable. It's possible that the repair will cost more than the cost to buy a new drive, and the electronics are not particularly easy to diagnose, so it's probably better to get an external drive than to risk messing with it further.
